5. This doctored photo that purports to show far-left candidate Jean-Luc Mélenchon wearing a Rolex.

Tweets like this, shared more than a hundred times, claim to show Mélenchon sporting a Rolex watch worth €17,750 — at odds with his radical left political leanings. The crude photo montage dates back to April 2016 and frequently reappears on Twitter accounts and Facebook pages affiliated with France’s far-right. The self-proclaimed environmental activist who started the post has affirmed over and over again that it was not intended as a joke.

"Fake news" designed to harm Qatar's relations with the U.S. played a major role in the diplomatic split between the tiny Gulf nation and its neighbors, say both U.S. officials and the Qatari government.

In a statement to NBC News, the Qatari government said it had been victimized by a "well-coordinated smear campaign designed to damage the image and reputation of Qatar. And the smear campaign, in turn, set the stage for the blockade and the ultimatum that followed in June."
At the center of the dispute between Qatar and other Gulf states, including Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates, are reports that the Qatari emir had praised Hamas and called Iran "an Islamic power," and that Qatar had paid nearly a billion dollars in ransom to al Qaeda for the release of a Qatari hunting party.

Both stories are false and apparently planted, say senior U.S. officials.

Read the Full Qatari Statement

In the most recent case, a U.S. intelligence official said that the quotes attributed to Qatar's ruler were phony and part of a campaign to hurt Qatar. Several officials confirmed the report in the Washington Post that someone working for the United Arab Emirates government hacked into Qatari news sites and social media on May 24 to plant the false comments attributed to Emir Sheikh Tamim Bin Hamad al-Thani.
The Washington Post says US intelligence agencies have confirmed that the United Arab Emirates was behind the hacking of Qatar News Agency.

The newspaper says the UAE arranged for false quotes to be attributed to the emir of Qatar, including describing Iran as an "Islamic power" - as well as praising Hamas.

Within days, Saudi Arabia, the UAE, Egypt and Bahrain accused Qatar of supporting "terrorism" - and cut diplomatic ties and closed their borders.

Qatar has consistently denied the allegations and said the false remarks were posted by hackers - an explanation rejected by the quartet.

Interesting facts you must know about beard growth

If you have come here to find out how long it takes to grow a beard, we have to tell you that there is no such thing. Beards grow at different rates for different people, depending on genetics, hormones, and other factors. Some people may grow a full beard in just a few months, while others may take years to grow a noticeable beard.

But there are some interesting facts you might not have known about beard growth:

1. Beards can be an excellent indicator of a man's health. A healthy beard grows more thickly and has a richer color than a beard that is thin or patchy.
2. Beards can have a social impact. In some cultures, beards are a sign of masculinity and strength, and can be a source of pride for the wearer.
3. Beards can improve a man's appearance. A well-groomed beard can add character and charm to a man's face.

So, if you're looking to grow a beard, remember that it's a personal journey, and there's no set time frame for it to happen. Be patient, and enjoy the process!

Hurricane Harvey has brought with it both a record amount of rain and questions about how much climate change can be blamed for the storm. Climate change did not cause Harvey, or any other storm, but it makes intense storms like Harvey more likely to occur, scientists say.
